Explore York Libraries and Archives
5 December 2016

Introduction

- I come from Explore York Libraries and Archives, which manages the libraries and archive service on behalf of City of York Council.
- Primarily going to focus this talk on identifying individuals rather than general local history, including some information you can find elsewhere in York and online.
- Will then also look at some of the other sources you can use to research the First World War, primarily relating to York.

Breakdown of session

- Getting started
- Serving personnel
- Conscientious objectors
- War casualties
- Finding out more
- Further information

Getting started

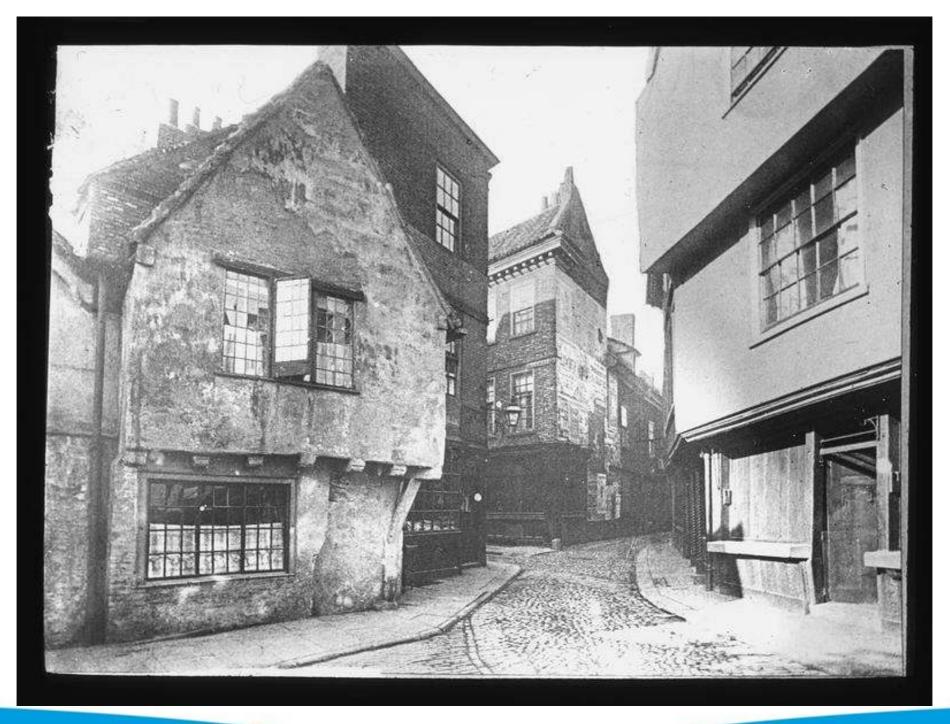

- What do you already know? Gather as much information as you can.
- Birth and marriage information
 - » Ancestry.com
- Where did they live and work before they were called up?
 - » 1911 census
 - » Trade directories
 - » Electoral registers

Old photographs

War service

- Did they serve overseas during the war?
 - » Service records
 - » Medal cards
 - » Regimental histories
- Did they serve at home?
 - » Business records
- Were they a conscientious objector?
- Did they die during the war?
 - » CWGC
 - » Coroner's records

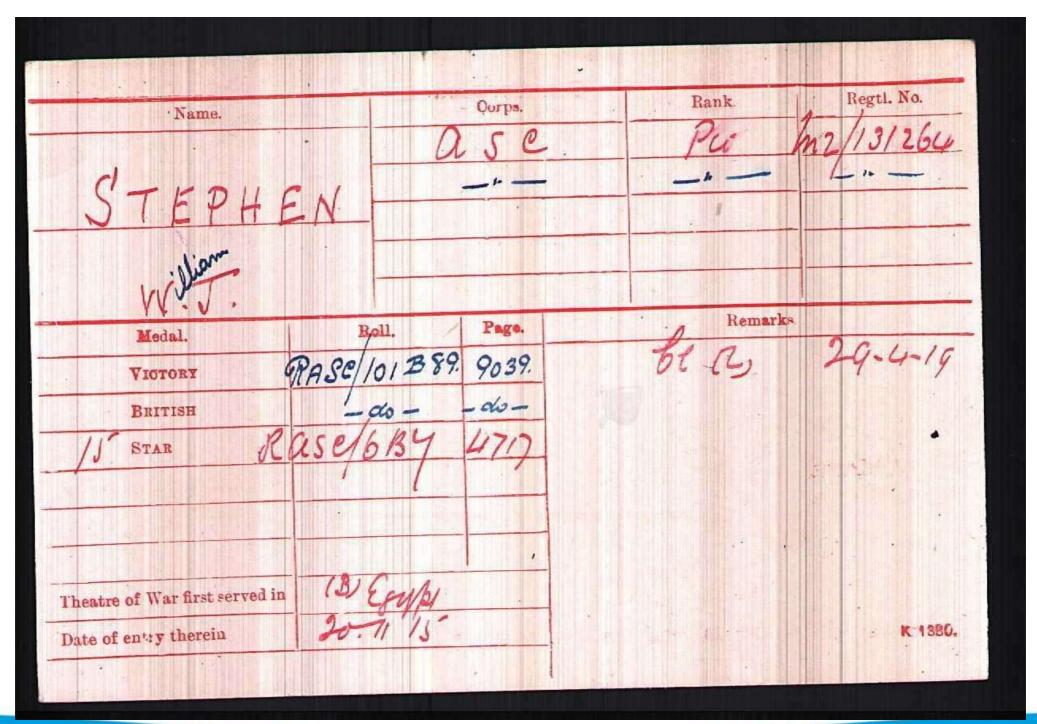

Service records

- Over half of the records relating to serving military personnel in the First World War were destroyed in an aerial bombing attack in September 1940.
- Only a 40% chance of finding a service record for someone who served.
- The rest were very badly damaged, but have been microfilmed.
- Copies are available to view at The National Archives at Kew, London, and on Ancestry.com.
- Very detailed, with full address and description, next of kin details and sometimes a medical history. Can also include information about discipline and occasional bouts of drunkenness!

Medal cards

Regimental histories and war diaries

- Surviving regimental war diaries can be found at the National Archives at Kew, or online through their website (for a charge).
- They vary greatly in detail, and most do not contain details of individual soldiers.
- They will, though, contain details of where regiments were and the action they were caught up in.
- It might also be worth looking in your local library for published histories of particular regiments during the First World War.

Those who served at home

Conscientious objectors

- In 1921, the Ministry of Health determined that all records relating to cases of exemption from National Service (conscription) should be destroyed, apart from the Central Tribunal.
- This means that very few records actually survive.
- At a local level, papers of individual conscientious objectors may survive in archives.

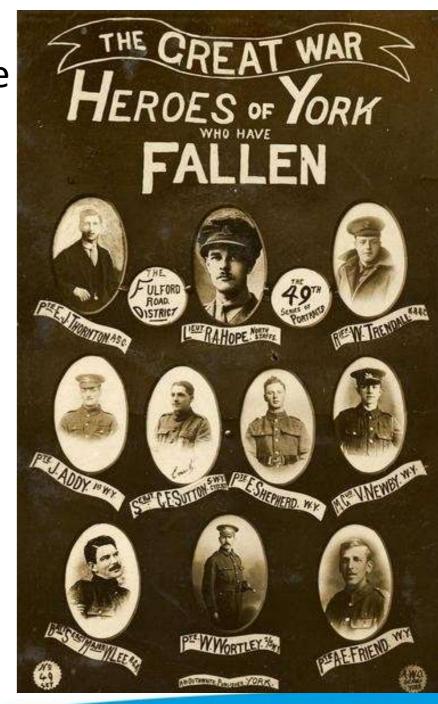

Casualties on active service

- Details of casualties who died on active service are held by the Commonwealth War Graves
 Commission, who are still responsible for grave sites and memorials both in the UK and overseas.
- You can find details of casualties on their website: www.cwgc.org.

Other sources and casualties at home

- Don't forget local newspapers many contain obituaries of those killed, details of those injured and information on medals received.
- They will also note any incidents at home e.g. civilian casualties and general information about life in the First World War in the local area e.g. Fundraising appeals etc.
- Information about civilian casualties will also appear in coroner's records, which can be accessed at local record offices. Transcripts usually appear in the newspapers as well.

Finding out more

- At a local level, archives services hold a lot of information about the First World War which you might never have thought of.
- I'll look at some of the archives held at Explore York Libraries and Archives here, but this is not an exhaustive list by any means. Get in contact with local archives services to find out what other records they have on the subject.
- Don't forget the Yorkshire Film archive, either, as they have moving film relating to the First World War in York.

neighbour, but their shining brown and yellow faces attracted the wasps. Behind the wall was a terrifying and witch-like old woman, more fear-making than any wasp. If our balls flew over, she hurried from the window where, like a spider, she kept malignant watch over us. In indescribable garments, one over-lapping the other; with a straggling grey mop of hair and a flourishing stick, she hurled curses at us from her side and confiscated our playthings. Only in moods of great temerity dare we play under her nose our boisterous games.

After a time the mud patch was ashphalted over and the sunflowers disappeared. Only the sparrows, like more mobile mice, pattered over the harsh surface, and a toad hid behind a broken brick, appearing to my delight, two summers following. The rest of the yard was given over to a pile of coke, a laundry shed and gear. We were not however denied the bliss of nearness to nature. Although our house was embedded in streets and shops, along the Hull Road, after passing a

THE WAR.

YORK CITIZENS' COMMITTEE.

In response to a request by the Lord Mayor, a Postic Meeting was held at the Mansion House on the 7th August, 1914, to consider the steps it is desirable to take in order that any want, disturbance of trade, or other trouble consequent upon the War may be relieved as far as possible.

The Lord Mayor submitted to the meeting a telegram which he had received from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales asking that a subscription list should be opened in furtherance of the National Relief Fund.

It was decided to appoint a central Committee, to be called the "York Citizens' Committee," and the following are the names of the persons so appointed, together with those added at subsequent meetings :- The Lord Mayor, The Recorder of York (H. T. Kemp, K.C.), The City Sheriff (R. N. Kay), A. S. Rowntree, M.P., J. G. Butcher, K.C., M.P., The Lady Mayeress, Miss Bolton, Mrs. E. R. Cross, Mrs. Fawcett, Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Glew, Mrs. Edwin Gray, Miss Jalland, Mrs. R. N. Kay, Miss Milner, Mrs. Newman, Mrs. J. Peters, Miss Purey Cust (in place of the Dean), Miss Welch, Rev. Caron Argles, P. Burtt, J. P. Clews, D. S. Crichton, Monsignor Provost Dawson, B. Dent, Councillor Dobbie, E. R. Dodsworth, Mr. Fearnley, Councillor Hardgrave, Mr. Hommert (Manager of the York Labour Exchange), Rev. J. Harding Jackson, R. Kay, B. Kilvington, H. E. Leetham, G. W. Lloyd, D. S. Mackay, A. P. Mawson, Alderman Meyer, Councillor Morrell, Mr. Spooner, Representative of North Eastern Railway Co., Alderman Sir J. Sykes Rymer, H. V. Scott, W. Shilleto, G. Sykes, Geoffrey Thompson, W. F. H. Thomson, A. Wilkinson, Councillor Wilkinson, The Town Clerk.

At a meeting of the Committee held on the 10th August, the following Sub-Committees were appointed, with power to add to their number:—

- (1) Finance—to deal with the collection of subscriptions and the control of finance;
- (2) Industry and Employment—to watch the effect of the War on Industries, to advocate the extension and maintenance of industry, to obtain employment for unemployed, etc.

Council records

- Council minutes refer to the issues regarding injured service personnel coming home and finding work, and the efforts made to try and employ them.
- Information about the erection of war memorials, and the creation of rolls of honour of those who served.
